

YOUNG CURATORS

The Young Curators will be a group of young people aged 16-24 living in the Highlands. They will have the opportunity to connect with other young people, learn something new and gain experience in the museum and gallery sector, working towards the creation of a display.

High Life Highland is working in partnership with CofGâr – Carmarthenshire Museums & Arts Service in Wales and the Irish Linen Centre & Lisburn Museum in Northern Ireland, as part of a network called 'Communities of Making'. The network will explore how local heritage and traditional making has evolved in these regions through the museum collection with the creation of an exhibition. And we need your help to do this!

Who are High Life Highland Museums?

High Life Highland Museums covers three venues Inverness Museum and Art Gallery, North Coast Visitor Centre in Thurso and the Highland Folk Museum in Newtonmore. Our project meetings will be split between Inverness Museum and Art Gallery and the Highland Folk Museum.

Inverness Museum & Art Gallery is located on Castle Wynd in the city centre. Our Museum has two galleries that explore the history of the Highlands and its people. The ground floor showcases how our landscape was formed, Pictish stones, medieval Inverness and Gaelic language and culture. The first floor showcases our extensive Jacobite collection, Highland music, Inverness silver and modern Inverness. Our Art Gallery has three display areas and hosts a programme of temporary and touring exhibitions that feature local, national and international art and contemporary craft.

The Highland Folk Museum is Britain's first open air museum. Located on an 80-acre site in Newtonmore, you can explore the living history of the Highlands. The site is divided into four main areas Aultarie Croft, 1930s working farm, Balameanach (Middle village) with a developing community of re-located buildings, the pinewoods and 'Baile Gean' the museum's unique reconstruction of an early 1700s Highland township.

You will be working alongside the Collection Curators, Visual Arts Curators, Conservators, Museum Assistants and Attendants, Engagement Officers, Artists and many other staff who are responsible for these two sites and their growing collections. We can't wait to work with you!
